Fabric Requirements

You'll need eighteen 5-3/4-inch print squares (six of each of the three colors) and seventy-two 3-3/8-inch white background squares. The large print below will be the center, and you'll need six pieces cut directionally 10-1/2-inches wide x 12-1/2-inches high.

Sewing Instructions

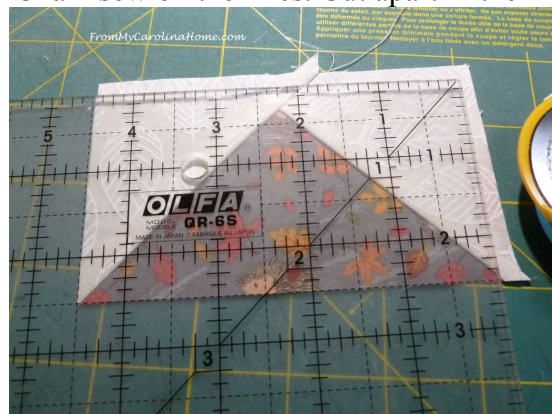

On the back of your 3-3/8-inch background squares, draw diagonal lines from corner to corner. I like to draw two lines, 1/4-inch away from the center using a 1/4-inch ruler.

Place one background square on the corner with the diagonal lines pointing to the center. Add another background square to the opposite corner with the lines touching. Pin in place and sew on the lines across both background squares. Cut apart down the center, leaving a 1/4-inch seam allowance. Press the background triangles up, forming a heart shape.

Place the remaining background squares on the sewn units on the remaining corner, with the lines running up between the top triangles. Chain sew on the lines. Cut apart in the center, again leaving a 1/4-inch seam allowance.

Press up, forming the flying geese. Trim to 4-1/2-inches by 2-1/2 inches.

Sew geese in rows of six. Be sure to sew precisely through the little 'x' at the top of the goose so your points come out sharp.

Attach the flying geese strips to the sides of the center print. I put mine going up on the left and down on the right. You can have them all going the same direction if you want, or do like mine.

Quilt as desired. Bind with a quarter inch binding.

Enjoy your Autumn Jubilee Placemats!
